

Angeliki Delikari read History and Archaeology at the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki (specialising in History). In December 1995, she was awarded the degree of Magister Artium (M. A.) at the Institute of Slavic Philology of the Julius-Maximilians University in Würzburg (Germany), with a thesis Das Bistum von Velitza (The Bishopric of Velitza). In February 2003, she took her Ph. D. in Historical Theology/History of the Slavic Churches at the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki with a thesis about Άγιος Γρηγόριος ο Σιναΐτης. Η δράση και η συμβολή του στη διάδοση του Ησυχασμού στα Βαλκάνια – Η σλαβική μετάφραση του Βίου του κατά το αρχαιότερο χειρόγραφο (St. Gregory of Sinai. His activity and contribution to the spread of Hesychasm in the Balkans. The Slavic translation of his Vita according to the oldest Slavonic manuscript).

She taught at the Institute of Classical Philology of the Julius-Maximilians University in Würzburg, at the Department of Balkan Studies of the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki and then at the University of Western Macedonia, and also at the Department of History and Ethnology of the Democritus University of Thrace. Since 2012, she has been Lecturer, Assistant Professor and Associate Professor of Medieval History of the Slavic People at the School of History and Archaeology of the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki).

She was Chairwoman of the International Research Network Pax-Byzantinoslava, Scientific Manager of the Center for the Study of the Cultural Heritage of Cyril and Methodius, General Secretary of the Hellenic Historical Society, Editor-in-Chief of the journal Cyrrillomethodianum (Thessaloniki/Greece) and International Secretary of the journal Crkvene Studije (Church Studies) (Niš/Serbia).

Her research interests focus on themes relating to the Medieval History and Culture of the Slavic People, Byzantine-Slavic relations, Historical Geography, Slavic influence on the creation of toponyms in Greece and in Europe in general, the Study and Edition of Slavic Manuscripts, Slavic Hagiography, Byzantine-Slavic relations on Mount Athos and in Macedonia, Medieval History of Russia, etc