Short CV of Georgios Agelopoulos

Georgios Agelopoulos is Associate Professor of Social and Political Anthropology at the School of History and Archaeology of the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki. He is also the Director of the Folklore Museum and Archives of the Aristotle University and the Director of the Digital Humanities Lab of the Faculty of Philosophy of the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki.

Agelopoulos studied sociology at Panteion University of Athens and social anthropology at the University of St Andrews (MPhil) and the University of Cambridge (PhD). His research interests include political anthropology, Balkan ethnography, the history of anthropological discourse in Greece and the Balkans, and the anthropology of migrants and refugees. Agelopoulos has taught at the University of Cambridge, the Panteion University of Athens, the University of Graz in Austria, the University of Nicosia in Cyprus and the University of Macedonia. He has been a Marie Curie Research Fellow of the EU D.G.XII, a Postdoctoral Research Affiliate at the Department of Social Anthropology, University of Cambridge, a Postdoctoral Fellow of the Greek State Scholarships Foundation, and a member of research teams supported by the EU D.G.V, the Greek Ministry of Education, the 6th EU Framework Programme, the 7th EU Framework Programme, the Greek National Research Institute and the Leverhulme Trust. He has supervised Ph.D. students at the Panteion University of Athens, the University of Macedonia, the University of Thessaly, the Université de Provence (Aix-Marseille I) and the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki.

From June 2017 to September 2018, Agelopoulos served as Secretary General of the Greek Ministry of Education. From September 2018 to July 2019, he served as Director of the Greek Prime Minister's Office in Thessaloniki. In addition to his academic work, Agelopoulos is a columnist in the Greek press focusing on issues related to identity politics, higher education, migration, social and solidarity economy.

https://people.auth.gr/agelop/?lang=en