

Dr. Nikos Lambrinos is Professor of Geography Education at the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, founder and President of the Hellenic digital earth Centre of Excellence, Aristotle University of Thessaloniki (https://www.auth.gr/university_unit/digital-earth/), founder and Director of the Greek ESERO (<https://esero.gr>), founder and Director of the Laboratory for Digital Analysis and Learning Tools Design of the Department of Primary Education, Aristotle University of Thessaloniki. Among other topics, his research interests include new methods of teaching Geography in schools, Geographic Information Systems and Remote Sensing as Geography teaching tools and online cartography for education. Prof. Dr. Lambrinos has participated in 28 national and international programs, 77 national and international conferences. He has organized and participated in 77 national teaching seminars on Geography, GIS and online cartography. He is the author of more than 100 research articles in Greek and international journals and conferences and 21 books and book-chapters in national and international publications. He has supervised 56 bachelor's theses, 15 master's theses and 5 doctoral theses, while he was and is a member of many PhD committees of various universities.